“Singing With Angels” is directed and produced by Brian Brough, whose credits include “16 Stones,” “Nowhere Safe” and “Scents and Sensibility.” The screenplay was written by Brittany Wiscombe (“Changing Hearts,” “Nowhere Safe” and “Christmas Angel”).

The movie — slated for an April 8, 2016, theatrical release — is historic in that it is the first full-length narrative feature where the choir is integrated significantly in the story line. While the choir has been the subject of documentaries (such as “One Voice” and “America’s Choir”) and been a part of TV specials and shows (“Mr. Krueger’s Christmas” and “Touched by an Angel”), “Singing With Angels,” as created by Brough and Wiscombe, is inspired by true events and tells a heart-warming story of one woman’s journey to join the choir.

“The choir is delighted to be collaborating on this film with Candlelight Media,” said Ron Jarrett, president of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir. “The story of the film will be an affirmation that the choir’s music can bring peace and hope and transform lives.”

The production is being shot on location at Temple Square in the Tabernacle and in Lehi, Ogden, West Valley and other areas in Utah.
